Properties of Environmentally Farmed Timber (EFT)

Using Environmentally Friendly Materials

Environmentally Farmed Timber (EFT) Rubberwood is the standard common name for the timber of Hevea brasiliensis

EFT is a hardwood from the maple family of woods.

EFT has very little tendency to warp or crack

EFT is Eco-Friendly

EFT is one of the more durable lumbers used in the manufacturing of today's home furnishings. As a member of the maple family, EFT has a dense grain character that is easily controlled in the kiln drying process. EFT has very little shrinkage making it one of the more stable construction materials available for furniture manufacturing.

Like maple, EFT is a sap producing species. In the case of maple, it is sap; in the case of EFT, it is latex. EFT produces the latex used in the world for all rubber-based products.

There is one more important feature of EFT that is very important in today's world. EFT is the ecologically "friendly" lumber used in today's furniture industry. The economic life of the rubber tree is generally 26-30 years. After this, latex yields become extremely low. Planters then fell the rubber trees and plant new ones. Unlike other woods that are cut down for the sole purpose of producing furniture, EFT is used after it completes its latex producing cycle and dies. EFT is eco-friendly, as we are now using what was going as waste.

Properties of EFT:

- Density (kg/M3 at 16%MC) ----- 560-640
- Tangential Shrinkage Coefficient (%)----- 1.2
- Radical Shrinkage Coefficient (%) ----- 0.8
- Hardness(N) ----- 4,350
- Static Bending, N/mm at 12% MC ----- 66
- Modulus of elasticity, n/mm at 12%MC----- 9,700
